Williamson argues that a new focus on the central activity of information gathering allows us to situate diplomacy in its natural context as one of several intertwined areas of crown service and as one of the several sites of production of political information under Elizabeth I Close attention to the material features of these letter books elucidates the environment in which they were produced copied and kept and exposes the shared skills and practices of diplomatic activity domestic governance and early modern archiving This archaeological exploration of epistolary and archival culture establishes a multi-tier of state actor that participates in even defines a notably early modern growth in administration and information management Extending this discussion to our own conditions of access a new parallel is drawn across two ages of information obsession as Williamson argues that the digital has a natural place in this textual history that we can no longer ignore This study makes significant contributions to epistolary culture diplomatic history and early modern studies more widely by showing that understanding Elizabethan diplomacy takes us far beyond any single ambassador or agent defined as such it is a way into an entire administrative landscape and political culture

Uprisings in Eighteenth-Century Britain Monika Barget, 2023-10-19 This study examines how the British Empire of the 18th century contained revolution by integrating opposition agents as new spaces of power opened up Monika Barget convincingly argues that this process of constitutionalisation meant that groups from the aristocracy to religious communities from the army to the people at large were brought into the system in a way that balanced the obvious serious challenges that the Glorious Revolution the Jacobite Rebellion the American Revolution and Jacobin threats of the late 18th century posed to the Empire Barget highlights the lasting political and legal repercussions of this process The structure of the chapters each focussing on specific agents and conflict media also links the history of political agency and political institutions with an expanding European and even trans continental media market Improving LCSH for Use in Online Catalogs Pauline Atherton Cochrane, 1986
