Online Literacy Coaching Rigor Rita Bean:

Handbook of Reading Disability Research Anne McGill-Franzen, Richard Allington, 2010-09-17 Bringing together a wide range of research on reading disabilities this comprehensive Handbook extends current discussion and thinking beyond a narrowly defined psychometric perspective Emphasizing that learning to read proficiently is a long term developmental process involving many interventions of various kinds all keyed to individual developmental needs it addresses traditional questions What is the nature or causes of reading disabilities How are reading disabilities assessed How should reading disabilities be remediated To what extent is remediation possible but from multiple or alternative perspectives Taking incursions into the broader research literature represented by linguistic and anthropological paradigms as well as psychological and educational research the volume is on the front line in exploring the relation of reading disability to learning and language to poverty and prejudice and to instruction and schooling The editors and authors are distinguished scholars with extensive research experience and publication records and numerous honors and awards from professional organizations representing the range of disciplines in the field of reading disabilities Throughout their contributions are contextualized within the framework of educators struggling to develop concrete instructional practices that meet the learning needs of the lowest achieving readers

"My Coach Got Me Excited about Literacy Even Through this Tough Year" ,2022 For over 100 years reading has been a critical topic of discussion in the education field Theories have been developed and revised on how children learn to read and as more research was completed Literacy and reading scores around the United States have been low for over ten years In 2019 only 32% of 4th graders nationwide have been proficient in reading Many states have developed laws around reading proficiency targeted at reaching reading proficiency by the end of third grade including Michigan s the Read by Grade Three Law In Michigan the Michigan Association of Intermediate School District Administrators in collaboration with early literacy experts created the Essential Instructional Practices in Early Literacy One county in Michigan developed a literacy coaching program for prekindergarten teachers This coaching program was the basis for this dissertation research that explores teacher and coach experiences in the program This research was completed as a mixed methods case study using both quantitative and qualitative data sources Surveys and interviews gathered perspectives of the coaches and teachers on coaching strategies that were effective for them In addition the perception of the quality of relationship between the coach and teacher was investigated Coaching was completed virtually due to the COVID 19 pandemic and participants shared their experiences with navigating coaching teaching and using technology in new ways Survey and interview data were analyzed using in vivo coding to explore initial categories and then themes The study describes a variety of coaching strategies that coaches and teachers found effective I also compare the reported impact of an in person versus virtual coaching on teachers literacy practices Constructive feedback was not only the strategy reported as used most often but also it was perceived to have the most impact on teaching practices by both coaches and teachers Teachers strong relationship with coaches affected their success those reporting a stronger relationship also reached their goals and gained new knowledge from the coaching program Resources and difficulties faced varied for the teachers these ranged from materials budget and available staff
