Speaking for the Enslaved Antoinette T Jackson, 2016-06-16 Focusing on the agency of enslaved Africans and their descendants in the South this work argues for the systematic unveiling and recovery of subjugated knowledge histories and cultural practices of those traditionally silenced and overlooked by national heritage projects and national public memories Jackson uses both ethnographic and ethnohistorical data to show the various ways African Americans actively created and maintained their own heritage and cultural formations Viewed through the lens of four distinctive plantation sites including the one on which that the ancestors of First Lady Michelle Obama lived everyday acts of living learning and surviving profoundly challenge the way American heritage has been constructed and represented A fascinating critical view of the ways culture history social policy and identity influence heritage sites and the business of heritage research management in public spaces

African American Women in the News Marian Meyers, 2013-07-24 African American Women in the News offers the first in depth examination of the varied representations of Black women in American journalism from analyses of coverage of domestic abuse and crack mothers to exploration of new media coverage of Michelle Obama on Youtube Marian Meyers interrogates the complex and often contradictory images of African American women in news media through detailed studies of national and local news the mainstream and Black press and traditional news outlets as well as newer digital platforms She argues that previous studies of African Americans and the news have largely ignored the representations of women as distinct from men and the ways in which socioeconomic class can be a determining factor in how Black women are portrayed in the news Meyers also proposes that a pattern of paternalistic racism as distinct from the modern racism found in previous studies of news coverage of African Americans is more likely to characterize the media's treatment of African American women Drawing on critical cultural studies and black feminist theory concerning representation and the intersectionality of gender race and class Meyers goes beyond the cultural myths and stereotypes of African American women to provide an updated portrayal of Black women today African American Women in the News is ideal for courses on African American studies American studies journalism studies media studies sociology studies women's studies and for professional journalists and students of journalism who seek to improve the diversity and sensitivity of their journalistic practice
