

New Developments in Alcoholism Treatment Research in Europe

Fred Rist, Carrie L. Randall, Nick Heather, and Karl Mann

This article presents the proceedings of a symposium held at the meeting of the International Society for Biomedical Research on Alcoholism (ISBRA) in Mannheim, Germany, in October 2004. The organizers and chairs were Karl F. Mann, Fred Rist and Carrie L. Randall. The presentations were (1) Searching for the acamprosate and naltrexone responders, by Karl Mann on behalf of the Project Predict Research team (K. Mann, R. Brück, H. Gann, U. Zimmermann, A. Heinz, M. Somojai et al.), (2) Treatment outcomes from the United Kingdom Alcohol Treatment Trial (UKATT), by Nick Heather on behalf of the UKATT research team (N. Heather, A. Copello, Ch. Godfrey, R. Hodgson, J. Orford, D. Raine, I. Russell, G. Tober), and (3) Conjoint screening and Brief intervention for Alcohol and Nicotine misuse in primary health care (BeAN), by Fred Rist on behalf of the BeAN research team (Ralf Demmel, Ines Aulhorn, Jutta Hagen, Barbara Schreurs, Fred Rist).

Key Words: Alcoholism, Pharmacotherapy, Craving, Psychotherapy, Social Network, Behavioral Therapy, Acamprosate, Naltrexone.

IN RECENT SYSTEMATIC reviews of the various treatment approaches to alcohol problems, two approaches emerged as consistently efficacious: Supportive medication, with acamprosate and naltrexone among the pharmacotherapies, and motivational and cognitive-behavioral techniques within the realm of psychosocial treatments (Miller and Wilbourne, 2002). However, even naltrexone and acamprosate are less efficacious than pharmacological treatments for other psychological disorders, as Kranzler and van Kirk (2001) have shown in a meta-analysis using the effect strength of SSRIs in depression as a reference for the effects of the two antidipsotropics. Naltrexone and acamprosate may address different aspects of alcohol dependence. Naltrexone appears primarily to reduce current drinking levels or the intensity of relapses, and acamprosate directly supports abstinence (Sinclair, 2001). Motivational and cognitive-behavioral treatments for alcohol dependence are also less efficacious than cognitive-behavioral treatments of anxiety disorders (Chambless and Ollendick, 2001). Thus, various strategies are currently needed to improve the efficacy of these treatment approaches beyond the current state.

One such approach searches for differential treatment indicators. However, in the realm of psychosocial treatments, this was not successful: In Project MATCH (Project MATCH Research Group, 1997a) clients were randomly assigned to one of three 12-week, manual-guided, individually delivered treatments: Cognitive Behavioral Coping Skills Therapy (CBT), Motivational Enhancement Therapy (MET) or Twelve-Step Facilitation Therapy (TST). Clients were then monitored over a 1-year posttreatment period and achieved significant improvements in all three treatments, but nine of 10 carefully selected primary matching variables failed to exert any significant effect on the one year outcomes. Thus, although a high proportion of patients in all 3 interventions achieved positive outcomes, the findings were essentially negative with regard to matching.

The idea of differential treatment indicators is pursued in Project Predict, an on-going study being conducted in Germany and presented in this symposium. Instead of using psychometrically measured personality variables as the basis for treatment matching (like in Project MATCH), Mann et al. (2004) assessed neurobiological functioning on different levels (including f-MRI, genetic profiling and the acoustic startle paradigm) to predict treatment response to either acamprosate or naltrexone. Both drugs have been combined in one published study (Kiefer et al., 2003) and in an US study, currently under final evaluation (The Combime Study Research Group, 2003). Here the combination of pharmacotherapy with different doses of psychotherapy

Sellers, 2013-03-13 This volume is the eighth in the Research Advances Series and the fifth published by Plenum Press The purpose of the series is to review new work in rapidly changing fields We do not expect reviews to cover the whole field of work on alcoholism and addiction Nor do we expect that they will be like annual reviews covering all work in a delimited field Our reviews are designed to explore only the most exciting parts of the total field and to focus on conclusions that can be made about them The series publishes one volume each year Volume 8 is an omnibus rather than a theme volume in that a wide range of topics is covered including research on alcohol opiates and tobacco As usual the greater emphasis is on alcohol research reflecting the importance of the problem and the volume of work to be reviewed With Volume 8 come some changes in the Editorial Board It will be the last volume in the series for Robert E Popham who has resigned from the Board He has been with the series since its inception and has contributed a great deal to its development The members of the Board are grateful for his help We are adding two new members Dr Howard Cappell whose field is experimental psychology and Dr Edward M Sellers in clinical medicine and pharmacology

Handbook of Psychology and Health, Volume I Robert J. Gatchel, Andrew Baum, Jerome E. Singer, 2021-09-30 Originally published in 1982 this volume deals with behavioral medicine and clinical psychology Much of what psychologists had been able to contribute to the study and treatment of health and illness had to this point been derived from clinical research and behavioral treatment This volume presents some of this work providing a fairly comprehensive view of the overlap between behavioral medicine and clinical psychology Its purpose was to present some of the traditional areas of research and practice in clinical psychology that had directly and indirectly contributed to the development of behavioral medicine Before the birth of behavioral medicine which subsequently attracted psychologists from many different areas ranging from social psychology to operant conditioning the chief link between psychology and medicine consisted of the relationship albeit sometimes fragile and tumultuous between clinical psychology and psychiatry Many of the behavioral assessment and treatment methods now being employed in the field of behavioral medicine were originally developed in the discipline of clinical psychology

Methamphetamine (METH) abuse has become a major public health problem world wide as demonstrated by increases in the number of emergency room visits, substance abuse treatment episodes and arrests attributable to METH manufacture and abuse. However, there are currently no pharmacological treatments for the wide range of symptoms associated with METH abuse. One of the reasons for this problem is that our knowledge of the cellular and molecular mechanisms underlying the development of METH-induced psychosis and dependence is limited. This book presents a review of the recent findings on METH abuse in humans. First, by describing the background and physiological effects of METH in humans. Next, by discussing the clinical findings on METH abusers derived using brain imaging techniques: single photon emission computed tomography (SPECT), positron emission tomography (PET), magnetic resonance spectroscopy (MRS) and functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI). Finally, by reviewing the potential therapeutic approaches for the treatment of METH abusers. National

G.M. Ames, L.A. Bennett, 2013-11-11 This volume is an important contribution to our understanding of culture and alcohol in the United States. Its appearance is also a milestone in the history of alcohol studies in American anthropology. Over the last six years, the volume's editors, initially along with Miriam Rodin, have served as the coorganizers of the Alcohol and Drug Study Group of the American Anthropological Association (AAA). In this capacity, they have organized sessions at the AAA and other meetings, greatly strengthened the research network with a regular and informative newsletter, and painstakingly promoted the publication of anthropological work on alcohol and drugs. Appearing just as the responsibility for the Study Group is passed on to others, this book is a fitting emblem of the care and energy with which its editors have built an institutional nexus for alcohol and drug anthropology in North America. The contents of this volume offer a uniquely wide sampling of the diversity of cultural patterns that make up the American experience with alcohol. The collective portrait the editors have assembled extends in several dimensions through time and history across such social differentiations as gender, age, grade and social class, and through such major social institutions as the church and the family. Clearly, the dominant dimension of variation in the material that follows, however, is ethnicity. The book offers us a sampler of unprecedented richness of the different experiences with alcohol of American ethnoreligious groups. Alcoholism and Women Marc
